Author: Joseph J. Kotva Jr. Publisher: Georgetown University Press ISBN: 1589014286 Category: Religion Page: 240 View: 741 Download → Despite growing interest among philosophers and theologians due to ethics, its proponents have done little to suggest why Christians in particular find virtue of ethics appealing. Joseph Kotva Jr. examines this issue in Christian Cause for Virtue, showing that the theory of virtue offers an ethical framework that is very compatible with Christian morality. Kotva defines the ethics of virtue and demonstrates its ability to express Christian beliefs about how to live a moral life. He evaluates the theory of virtue in the light of systematic theology and arguing that Christian ethics can be profitably linked to the neo- aristotle ethic of virtue. Ecumenical in tone, this book book careful but accessible introduction to the latest philosophical stories of virtue and offers an original, decidedly Christian adaptation of these ideas. This will make a difference to students and scholars of philosophy, theology and religion, as well as to those interested in the debate around the ethics of virtue. Evans Publisher: BHS Publishing Group ISBN: 9781433671821 Category: Religion Page: 203 View: 807 Download → In taking Christian moral thought seriously - the first book in a series of Christian ethics - editor Jeremy A. Evans establishes that the separation of church and state is not a principle of the U.S. Constitution (or any other founding document). Thus, there should be a social interest in not hindering the full participation of a religious person in the American market of ideas. Evans invites readers from Christian and non-Christian communities to consider appropriate scholarships here, knowing that the inability of either side to take seriously their well-prepared thoughts in science, politics and education undermines the very very idea that we are looking for truth. Topics and contributors include: The theory of the public mind of John Rawls (Allen Goering, James Noland) - Given the moral climate in America, is a non-voting position permissible for Christians? (Kent Dunnington) - What is the significance of religious differences, and what is the impact of disagreement on the justification of religious beliefs? (John Depo) - How are current models of scientific explanation not incompatible with religious beliefs (John Ross Churchill) - Caring for creation - what is our responsibility to the environment? (David Henderson) - Will theologians and philosophers miss the point on abortion? (James Noland) - Emphasis on diversity in education - what is the agenda, its method and its consequences? Author: Samuel Waje Kunhiyop Publisher: Hippo Books ISBN: 9780310590606 Category: Religion Page: 416 View: 309 Download → This is an introduction to African Christian ethics for Christian colleges and Bible schools. The book is divided into two parts. The first part is devoted to the theory of ethics, and the second - practical issues. The issues are grouped into the following six sections: socio-political issues, financial issues, marriage, sexual issues, medical issues and religious issues. Each section begins with a brief general introduction, followed by chapters on specific issues in this area. Each chapter begins with an introduction, discusses traditional African thinking on the subject, presents an analysis of relevant biblical materials and concludes with some recommendations. There are questions at the end of each chapter for discussion or personal reflection, often asking students to reflect on how the discussion in the chapter relates to their ministry situation. Rather, the challenge is to re-emphasize the meaning and substance of the core of Christian ethics as opposed to a clear alternative. ... What about a world in which our technologies promise great good but also threaten our existence? What is God doing in a world where the demands of accumulation and acquisition create division and despair? Can Christians hope for a positive influence in a world that does not always support, reflect, or even understand Christian commitments? Christian ethics often raise questions such as these, and possible answers vary greatly. Paul's letter to the Ephesians is a huge resource for learning the correct answer to perhaps the most difficult question of all: What is God doing to evil? The role of Christian ethics is to take seriously the problem that, whatever God does, God encourages us to engage in a distinctive task that embraces our own obligations works in divine purpose. The Ephesians say that God has taken the initiative to pursue this goal and, remarkably, suggests that we ourselves are part of the answer to the question of what God does to evil? In this sense, universalism served feminist ethics well. There is also, however, a growing recognition in feminism that such universal claims require a methodology in ethical reasoning that is increasingly understood as itself... Tollefsen Publisher: Cambridge University Press ISBN: 9781139868297 Category: Religion Page: View: 180 Download → This book protects the controversial absolute view of lies that argues that an allegation contrary to the speaker's mind is always wrong, regardless of the speaker's intentions. While most people believe that a lie told in a good cause, such as protecting Jews from being discovered by the Nazis, is morally acceptable, Christopher Tolefsen argues that Christians should maintain an absolute point of view. He looks back at the writings of Augustine and Aquino to illustrate that lies violate the basic human good of integrity and sociality and seriously jeopardize the values of religion and truth. He criticizes the relatively permissic views of Cassian, Bonhoffer and Niebur and argues that lies often jeopardize the good deeds they are told. Aside from developing a moral absolute versus lie, this book explores questions about who we owe the truth to and when, and what steps we can take when we shouldn't give it. A safe universe without the possibility of adversity would be a mechanical toy, not a creation. The glorious universe will be the place where trouble was eventually overcome. Christians believe in one God, who is three People. God is Heavenly Father risking to make a real world full of living people capable of happiness. Jesus Christ, God's Son, came as a man to take responsibility for creation. He suffered and died; and he rose from death to The whole enterprise Show that creation can and will be done well. People do not have to work on their faith, but they are encouraged to belong to the church in order to keep in touch with God's Spirit. These principles are based on what Beauchamp and Childress call common morality. This book uses theological themes of the New Testament to enhance the importance of these principles of bioethics. The main text of the New Testament for this study is the double commandment of Jesus to love God and love his neighbor. Three theological themes from this study - the image of God, the covenant, and the pursuit of healing - is deeply rooted in the New Testament and in the Ministry of Jesus. This dissertation uses three modern bioethics principles based on the Belmont report. These are the principles of respect for people, justice and benevolence. In each case, theological themes reinforce the importance of these principles of bioethics. Each of the three principles, as understood in three theological topics, applies to the current issue of bioethics to demonstrate the effectiveness of this approach. The three current issues that have been addressed are the failure or retention of life-saving treatment, the distribution of health care in the United States and the use of palliative care. necessarily he administers the ordinances to a Christian who is at risk of death; how much he commits if he does it... ascetic theology will be overcome, and moral theology will once again become the doctrine of growing Christian life.
